

May 1, 2019 -- Farmingdale, New York

elite|studio e Founder Recognized as AJC's National Corporate Innovator

Long Island businessman, Eric D. Weiss, will be presented the AJC's National Corporate Innovator Award at its 2019 Food Service & Hospitality Division Dinner next month.

Weiss is the founder, President & CEO of elite|studio e located in Farmingdale, NY. The 20-year old company provides foodservice design, build and consulting solutions for the on-site corporate dining industry. "One of the foundations elite|studio e was built on is innovation. We pride ourselves on being ahead of the curve in talent, creativity, and knowledge, to best serve the needs of our clients," he said.

Over the years, Weiss and elite|studio e have received many accolades, but this award from AJC brings new meaning. In addition to recognizing Weiss' creative business model, part of the organization's mission is to advance human rights and democratic values in the United States and around the world. "With the state of our country and the hatred around the globe, it's important to support causes like this one," he said.

Weiss, who has lived on Long Island nearly his entire life, is active in local religious and civic organizations as well. He is a past board member and founder of Temple Chaverim in Plainview and serves on the Board of Governors at the Hamlet Golf & Country Club in Commack.

The AJC Food Service & Hospitality Dinner is at the New York Botanical Garden on Wednesday, June 13th. AJC, based in New York, with offices across the United States and posts around the world, is the premier global Jewish advocacy organization. Founded in 1906, AJC combats anti-Semitism and other forms of hatred and extremism.

To learn more about the event and the AJC, contact Gary Spruch, Director of Development Communications, at spruchg@ajc.org or 212.891.1352. For more information about elite|studio e, contact Marcy J. Weiss, Associate Director of Marketing, at mweiss@elitestudioe.com or 631.420.9400.

###